Widow will get SGI compensation after car crash

About-face. Regina woman initially told she wouldn't receive any money because drunk-driving charge against man who hit husband's vehicle had been stayed

A woman whose husband was killed in a car crash will get compensation from Saskatchewan Government Insurance after all.

Donna Harpauer, minister responsible for SGI, says the insurer has decided to make an exception and pay Rosmarie Boxall of Regina.

"Having a day to review the act, the circumstances of the Boxall tragedy and in the spirit of the legislation ... we're going to make an ex gratia payment because the circumstances in this case are very, very rare and unusual," Harpauer said on Thursday.

Rosmarie Boxall's husband, John, died in February 2013 after his vehicle was hit by a stolen pickup truck speeding through a Regina intersection.

Jordan Thomas Lee McNabb pleaded guilty to four charges, including criminal negligence causing death. McNabb was sentenced to 10 years in prison, although he got one year of credit for time already served.

A charge of impaired driving causing death was stayed, although court heard McNabb was drunk when he hit Boxall's vehicle.

Rosmarie Boxall was initially told by SGI that she wouldn't receive any money because the drunk-driving charge against McNabb had been stayed.

Boxall said on Tuesday that she is entitled to $60,000 under the Fatal Accidents Act and that each of her three stepdaughters should receive $30,000. She had been trying to get compensation since the crash.

Harpauer said she called Boxall to let her know about the change.

"She was very gracious, very gracious," Harpauer said.

"And we agree that this doesn't make her circumstance less tragic, but I could do what I could do." THE CANADIAN PRESS

More probable measles cases in unimmunized kids

Health. Province's top doctor encourages parents to get their children vaccinated

Health officials in Saskatchewan are urging parents to have their children vaccinated after word of three probable measles cases in unimmunized youngsters.

The Prairie North Health Region, which covers the cities of Lloydminster and North Battleford, is reporting the probable illnesses in addition to one confirmed case in an unimmunized child.

Chief medical health officer Dr. Saqib Shahab says Saskatchewan's current childhood vaccination rate is not high enough to prevent outbreaks.

"The biggest thing that can prevent outbreaks of measles is up-to-date immunizations in children," Shahab said at a news conference in Regina on Thursday.

He said parents need to ensure that their children have two doses of measles vaccine by age two.

Saskatchewan Health reports that 89 per cent of children have had their first measles vaccinations by the age of two, and that 75 per cent of children have had their second doses by that time.

"One dose gives 95 per cent protection and two doses gives 99 per cent protection," Shahab explained.

"So if there are children in a daycare and everyone just got one dose ... that daycare will still have an outbreak."

Children usually get the first vaccines when they're a year old, but Shahab said it can be given earlier if kids are travelling to Alberta, where a measles outbreak has been declared.

"That is now possible that if you're (going) to Alberta, you can get an earlier dose ... if you have a child aged six to 12 months."

Saskatchewan has reported 12 confirmed and three probable cases of measles this year.

Legislature

NDP leery of U of S overhaul

The Opposition NDP is raising concerns in the legislature about an overhaul of the University of Saskatchewan, but the government says everything is under control.

The Saskatoon-based university has released a plan that includes cutting jobs, reorganizing the administration and dissolving some programs to try to save about $25 million.

NDP Leader Cam Broten says students are on edge over program cuts and the government is dismissing concerns from faculty.

Broten notes that the plan calls for the School of Public Health to be rolled into the College of Medicine, which he says could jeopardize the college's recently earned international accreditation.

Advanced Education Minister Rob Norris says concerns from students, staff and faculty are not being overlooked.

Norris says the restructuring is an internal university matter that will make the school better and not jeopardize any accreditation.

The plan is part of a bigger response by the University of Saskatchewan to address a projected $44.5-million deficit in its operating budget by 2016.

It was developed by the provost's committee and includes proposals to cut three dean positions and dissolve the Centre for Continuing and Distance Education, as well as the Education and Media Access and Production unit, by the end of the year.

It also warns that almost every level of the university and virtually every employee will be affected by a new organizational design.

The provost's committee says due to the magnitude of the changes being contemplated, the journey will be "arduous."

City's first Fan Expo to feature distinctly Saskatchewan touch

Geeks, jocks in perfect harmony. Grey Cup and cheerleaders to share space with nerd legends

SARAH TAGUIAM
sarah.taguiam@metronews.ca

Regina's sci-fi, comic and gaming enthusiasts can look forward to two days of geeking out as Fan Expo brings its fun and fantasy to the Queen City this weekend.

On Saturday and Sunday, part of Evraz Place will be transformed into a nerd paradise as actors, artists, writers and creators with popular TV shows, movies, video games and comic books descend on Canada Centre to mingle with their fans.

"There's already an electricity building up around the event," said event co-ordinator James Armstrong.

Armstrong anticipates thousands of fans will attend and get into costume for the inaugural Fan Expo Regina.

The event includes anime voice-over workshops, sketch stations, show screenings and vending stations involving retailers from across Canada.

Celebrities include Tia Carrere of Relic Hunter, IronE Singleton of The Walking Dead, Kevin Sorbo of Andromeda and Hercules, Marina Sirtis of Star Trek: The Next Generation and Ray Park of G.I. Joe and Star Wars.

Unlike other Fan Expos, however, Regina's version will have a special Saskatchewan touch as the Roughriders cheerleaders and the Grey Cup make an appearance.

"I watch the Grey Cup and you may be a comic-book fan or a fantasy fan, but it seems that everyone in Regina is a Riders fan," Armstrong said. "So it was a natural fit for us."

Fan Expo Regina will also have a section dedicated to local authors and Saskatchewan reading organizations.

A man gets made up as Darth Maul of Star Wars at the Vancouver Convention Centre during the final day of Fan Expo Vancouver on April 20. Fan Expo welcomes fans of science fiction, gaming and comic-book culture and will visit Regina on Saturday and Sunday. MATT DESOUZA/METRO

Mobile patient simulator to teach all across province

STARS has launched a mobile patient simulation unit that travels to Saskatchewan's rural communities and teaches critical care to emergency care providers.

The mobile education unit (MEU) — essentially a motor home set up as an emergency room — has a computerized patient-simulating mannequin.

The mannequin can breathe, bleed, speak and mimic human responses to medical care. It can also run lifelike medical scenarios, such as coronary artery diseases, respiratory failures and trauma.

The $250,000 MEU has adult, child and infant mannequins. It is the fourth MEU that STARS has in the Prairies: there are two in Alberta, and one in Manitoba.

Mediation fails

Health workers vote for strike

Health workers in Saskatchewan have voted 85 per cent in favour of a strike after negotiations involving a provincial mediator failed to get them a new contract.

The Health Sciences Association of Saskatchewan represents 30 groups of workers, including paramedics, hospital pharmacists and occupational therapists.

President Karen Wasylenko says staffing levels are the biggest concern for her members.

"We see wait lists that are increasing, we see emergency care services that are becoming unsafe because of staffing," Wasylenko said.

"They want to send a message to the employer that they expect serious bargaining and they want an agreement."

Sparks fly over Tories' proposed elections overhaul

Fair Elections Act.
Proposed changes to law will cause hundreds of thousands to lose right to vote, critics charge

The Conservative bill to tighten up election laws is in the final stages of review at a House of Commons committee, and things are getting ugly.

After long hours of scrutiny of the Fair Elections Act's many clauses, only two technical amendments by the opposition had been approved by Thursday afternoon.

The only substantive amendments allowed to pass came from the government. Changes to the legislation have been fuelled from within the Conservative caucus.

New Democrat MP David Christopherson's frustration boiled over when the committee rejected a proposal to ensure voter information cards are marked prominently to indicate they are not considered valid ID.

The proposed Act has eliminated the cards as a fall-back ID for voters who discover they don't have the right documents when they show up to cast a ballot.

"We know, and Canadians know, that this is all about trying to get the fix in for the Conservatives in every way they can, and that voter suppression is alive and well in the government of Canada," said Christopherson.

The Conservatives countered that the chief electoral officer already has authority over the markings placed on voter identification cards, and so the NDP amendment was not needed.

The opposition has argued that hundreds of thousands of voters, including First Nations, the homeless and students, will be disenfranchised by eliminating the use of the voter cards, as well as by new limitations on citizens vouching for the identity of others.

Among the bill's provisions

- Voters who come to polls without documents can't use voter information cards as fall-back ID.
- New limitations are proposed on citizens vouching for the identity of others.

Flight 370

Missing plane details revealed

Air traffic controllers did not realize that Malaysia Airlines Flight 370 was missing until 17 minutes after it disappeared from civilian radar, according to a preliminary report on the plane's disappearance released Thursday by Malaysia's government.

The government also released other information from the investigation into the flight, including audio recordings of conversations between the cockpit and air traffic control, the plane's cargo manifest and its seating plan.

It provided a map showing the Boeing 777's deduced flight path and a document detailing actions taken by authorities during the hours of confusion that followed the jet's disappearance near the border between Malaysian and Vietnamese airspace. Many of the details have previously been disclosed.

The report noted that there is no requirement for real-time tracking of commercial aircraft, and said the uncertainty about Flight 370's last position made it much more difficult to locate the plane.

Toronto mayoral candidate Karen Stintz calls Rob Ford's remarks "gross." Scan the photo below with your Metro News app to see a video of her and fellow candidate Olivia Chow's response.

Ford silent as he heads to rehab

'He's a broken man.' But mayor will apparently remain in the running for October's election

Mayor Rob Ford left home Thursday, hours after announcing plans to take leave to deal with his substance-abuse problems amid a triple dose of scandalizing revelations that have raised further questions about his fitness for office.

Confronted with reports of a recent video showing him allegedly smoking crack cocaine, an audio recording of the mayor spewing profanities and making lewd comments about a fellow mayoral contender, and witness accounts of him snorting cocaine at a city nightclub, Ford said he would be seeking "immediate help."

"He's a broken man. He's got a lot of demons," Ford's lawyer Dennis Morris told The Canadian Press. "He realizes that he's not well and in need of help. He's just running off the rails. That's something he now appreciates."

Ford did not speak to reporters in front of his home as he left in a two-car convoy Thursday morning.

A private plane flew him to Chicago, Global TV reported, while CBC cited his brother as saying Ford would be spending 30 days at an unspecified addictions facility.

At a news conference Thursday, an emotional Doug Ford said facing your problems and deciding to seek help is not easy. "I told Rob that everyone knows someone who has faced these challenges and I know they will wish him well and a speedy recovery," he said.

The scandal-plagued mayor's latest woes began late Wednesday, with a trio of damaging newspaper reports.

The Globe and Mail said a drug dealer had shown two of its reporters video of Ford allegedly smoking what was said to be crack in the basement of his sister's home early Saturday morning.

Then, in an audio recording from a bar obtained by the Toronto Sun, Ford is heard making anti-gay remarks, using an offensive ethnic slur, and saying he would like to "jam" rival candidate Karen Stintz.

In a third report, the Toronto Star published details of "two nights of utter debauchery" involving Ford at a Toronto nightclub a few weeks ago.

Down, but not out

- Despite his announced leave from both the mayor's office and his re-election campaign, Ford will apparently remain in the running for October's municipal vote.
- Deputy Mayor Norm Kelly, who has been doing most of Ford's job since council stripped him of most of his mayoral duties last year, has been left firmly in charge.

Ford seeks help

The world reacts

When Toronto's confessed crack-smoking mayor announced Wednesday night that he was taking a break from his re-election campaign to seek "immediate" professional help for his issues, the rest of the world took notice.

International media were almost as quick to report the latest revelations in the Rob Ford scandal as hometown news outlets, with a media report of another video allegedly showing the mayor smoking crack snagging top headlines.

Social media was also instantly abuzz after two Toronto newspapers printed fresh allegations concerning the controversial mayor.

Rather than issuing an outright denial, as he has done in similar situations, Ford issued a statement through his lawyer saying he planned to take a 30-day leave to address his problems.

The mayor has been a fixture of foreign media coverage since his admission, last November, that he had smoked crack cocaine in the past.

His much-hyped appearance on Jimmy Kimmel's late-night talk show only increased his international profile.

Kimmel, who razzed the mayor and his previous "drunken stupors" before a late-night audience in February, seemed to recognize that the latest allegations were no laughing matter.

"All jokes aside, I hope @TOMayorFord really does get the help he obviously needs," Kimmel wrote on Twitter.

The mayor, a vocal critic of much Canadian news coverage, has often praised foreign media for adopting what he described as a less combative tone.

Wednesday's headlines, however, lacked the gentle touch.

"Toronto 'Crack Mayor' Rob Ford — Going to Rehab After Latest Drunken Rant," read the TMZ banner.

55 colleges facing sexual assault inquiries

Fifty-five colleges and universities — big and small, public and private — are being investigated over their handling of sexual abuse complaints, the U.S. Education Department revealed Thursday.

The department's release of the list is unprecedented and comes as the Obama administration seeks to shed greater light on the issue of sexual assault in higher education and how it is being handled.

Going forward, the department said, it will keep an updated list of schools facing such investigations and make it available upon request.

The schools range from big public universities including Ohio State University, the University of California, Berkeley, and Arizona State University to private schools including Knox College in Illinois, Swarthmore College in Pennsylvania and Catholic University of America in the District of Columbia. Ivy League schools including Harvard, Princeton and Dartmouth are also on the list.

About half of all states had schools under investigation.

Massachusetts led with six schools on the list. They included Amherst College, Boston University, Emerson College, Harvard College, Harvard University Law School and the University of Massachusetts-Amherst.

The agency previously would confirm such Title IX investigations when asked, but students and others were often unaware of them.

Catherine E. Lhamon, the assistant secretary of education for civil rights, said in a statement that a school's presence on the list does not mean that it has violated the law but that an investigation of complaints is underway.

Military pull out:

Ukraine crisis. Ukrainian president renews draft amid 'threats of encroachment'

Russian President Vladimir Putin said Thursday that Ukraine should withdraw its military units from the eastern and southern regions of the country, where anti-government insurgents are seizing buildings, but hours later, Ukraine's acting president ordered the military draft be renewed as the unrest intensifies.

Although Ukraine last year announced plans to end military conscription and transfer to an all-volunteer force, Oleksandr Turchynov said in his order that the draft must be renewed in light of "threats of encroachment on Ukraine's territorial integrity and interference by Russia in the internal affairs of Ukraine."

Moscow has consistently denounced Ukrainian security forces' largely ineffectual "anti-terrorist" operation against the eastern insurgents and warned they shouldn't commit violence against civilians. In a telephone conversation with German Chancellor Angela Merkel, Putin said the removal of military units from the south and east was the "main thing."

Turchynov's order didn't specify where conscript-bolstered forces could be deployed. Earlier in the week, he said police and security forces had been effectively "helpless" against insurgents in the Donetsk and Luhansk regions, and that efforts should be focused on preventing its spread to other parts of the country.

In the regional capital city of Donetsk, anti-government demonstrators took over the regional prosecutor's office Thursday. Donetsk is the heartland of support for Russia-friendly former President Viktor Yanukovych.

Missing Canadian filmmaker found dead at temples

The family of Dave Walker, a Canadian filmmaker who went missing in Cambodia in February, says he was found dead on Thursday.

A statement issued on behalf of Walker's family says his body was reportedly discovered by a child at the Angkor Wat temples in Siem Reap, Cambodia.

Cambodian law enforcement officials told the family it appeared Walker had died several weeks ago.

The statement says a doctor at the site was unable to determine a cause of death and an autopsy will be held to try to determine how and when Walker died.

Forensic officer Pheng Pich says there are no initial signs of foul play.

Taliban attack kills at least 13

A suicide car bomber detonated his explosives at a busy checkpoint in central Afghanistan, killing at least 13 people Thursday, an official said. The Taliban quickly claimed responsibility for the attack.

The attack on the entry checkpoint into Panjshir province killed five police officers and one intelligence officer assigned to the post, provincial police chief Aziz Ghyrat said.

Seven civilian construction workers were also killed in the blast, which Gyrat said happened in the late afternoon as cars were lined up to be searched before entering the province on a narrow mountain road.

Several other civilians in other vehicles were wounded in the blast, Gyrat said.

Canada can't help Ukraine as energy supplier

Canada has little hope of reaping any kind of energy or resource windfall from the crisis in Ukraine.

That message was delivered Thursday to a House of Commons committee in testimony by energy experts from Alberta, Europe, and Ukraine. The committee is hearing evidence on whether there are opportunities for Canada to export oil and gas to Europe and help wean Ukraine off its dependence on Russian energy.

The natural resources committee was told that Canada is the better part of a decade away from having the pipelines and other infrastructure necessary to be a meaningful energy supplier to Europe.

Russia supplies most of Ukraine's natural gas, giving it an economic lever over the Ukrainian military — one it is currently exercising.

Russia annexed the Crimean Peninsula last month while pro-Russian gunmen are taking over cities in the country's eastern region.

The testimony offered a sobering counterpoint to the Harper government's public enthusiasm about increased Canadian energy exports to Europe.

German Chancellor Angela Merkel appeared unenthusiastic about that prospect when she hosted Prime Minister Stephen Harper in March. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Video released by ferry victim's family shows last moments

Doomed journey. More than 300 people are dead or missing in the sinking aftermath

"We're all finished. I have to leave some farewell words before I die."

An anonymous student aboard the sinking ferry Sewol, in one of many farewells caught on video taken from the recovered cellphone of 17-year-old Park Su-hyeon.

Soon after the ferry began to tilt, there was nervous laughter, jokes about the Titanic and talk of selfies and Facebook posts from the doomed high school students huddled below deck.

But the lighthearted atmosphere soon turned serious as the listing worsened. Fear began building, and one student asked, "Am I really going to die?"

The shaky video — at times poignant and heartbreaking as the teens said last words to their loved ones — was found on the cellphone belonging to 17-year-old Park Su-hyeon when his body was recovered after the disaster on the morning of April 16 off South Korea.

The boy's father, Park Jong-dae, provided it Thursday to The Associated Press, saying he wanted to show the world the conditions aboard the Sewol as it sank. He earlier released it to select South Korean media.

About 220 bodies, mostly from inside the submerged vessel, have been recovered. More than 80 per cent of the victims were students from a high school in Ansan, south of Seoul, on their way to the tourist island of Jeju for a school trip.

The group of teens in Park Su-hyeon's video alternated between bluster, attempts at humour and unmistakable fear.

Only one could be seen wearing a life jacket at the beginning of the clips, which started at 8:52 a.m. and ended, with a small break between them, at 9:09 a.m., when everyone appeared to be wearing them.

Some of the students struggled as they tried to buckle the life jackets. As the listing worsened, they joked about "final commemorative pictures" and "defying gravity" by trying to walk on the walls.

"It's like we're becoming the Titanic," one student said.

Greenpeace. Activists arrested in oil dispute

Dutch police say they detained 31 Greenpeace activists who attempted to prevent a Russian tanker carrying the first oil produced by a new offshore platform in the Arctic Ocean from mooring at Rotterdam Port on Thursday.

The environmental group sent two ships, plus a fleet of rubber rafts, paragliders and activists on shore, to meet the Mikhail Ulyanov, a tanker chartered by Russia's state-controlled oil company, Gazprom OAO.

Activists painted the words "No Arctic Oil" in white letters on the hull of the Russian tanker. After several hours, the Ulyanov was able to dock safely.

Greenpeace opposes oil production inside the Arctic Circle, warning of the danger of a spill in a pristine and difficult-to-reach area — as well as the threat of worsening global warming caused by using fossil fuels. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Shootings test U.S. 'stand your ground' laws

Intruders lured into fatal encounters. Two recent cases involve people who said they were afraid of homes being burgled again

A Montana man is accused of setting a trap and blasting a shotgun into his garage, killing a 17-year-old German exchange student. A Minnesota man is convicted of lying in wait in his basement for two teenagers and killing them during a break-in.

The two recent cases have intensified the debate about America's so-called "stand your ground" laws: Do laws that allow private citizens to protect their property also let them set a trap and wait for someone to kill?

In Montana, Markus Kaarma told investigators his home had been burgled twice before Sunday's shooting death of Diren Dede. The night of the shooting, Kaarma and his partner, Janelle Pflager, left their garage door open and Pflager left her purse in the garage, prosecutors said.

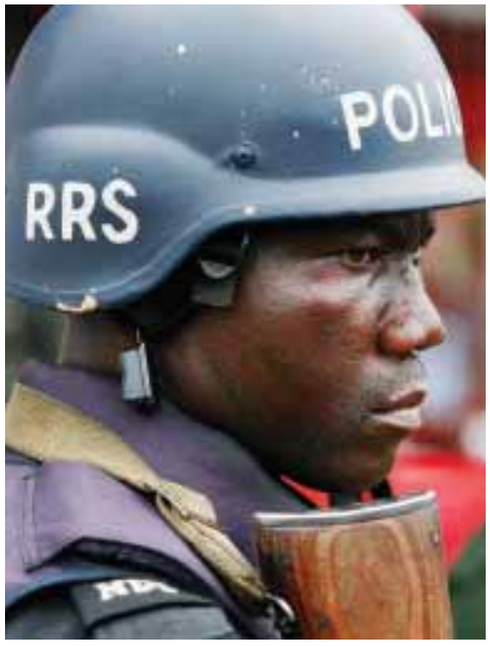
When they heard sounds, Kaarma said he took his shotgun and without speaking fired four times. Dede was hit in the head and the arm.

In Minnesota, Byron Smith, a 65-year-old retiree, was convicted of premeditated murder Tuesday. in the shooting of Nick Brady, 17, and Haile Kifer, 18, after the cousins broke into his home in 2012. Smith's attorney said burglars had previously hit his client's home, and he was afraid.

Prosecutors said Smith moved his truck to make it look as though no one was home, and waited in the basement with food, water and two guns. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

What the laws say

- Montana's law says a person is justified in using deadly force to prevent an assault or a forcible felony.
- Minnesota law allows the use of deadly force in a home to prevent a felony, but it must be considered a reasonable response.



Outrage over kidnapped Nigerian schoolgirls grows

Aboriginal women. Tories won't budge on inquiry

The Conservative government is resisting renewed calls for an inquiry into murdered and missing aboriginal women despite a media report that suggests there may be hundreds more cases than previously thought.

Public Safety Minister Steven Blaney was asked Thursday to call an inquiry in light of a report by the Aboriginal Peoples Television Network that Canada may be home to more than 1,000 cases of murdered and missing women.

His answer, in short: no.

Instead, Blaney launched a partisan broadside against the NDP's refusal to support the budget bill, which includes of money aimed at stopping violence against aboriginal women and girls.

APTN, citing an anonymous source, reported that the RCMP have identified more than 1,000 cases after contacting more than 200 other police forces across the country. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Man vs. environment

"The reality is that you can take the best people in the world and — after a long period of time — things will start to slowly break down because people are unhappy with the environment..."

BRYAN WEISMILLER
Metro in Calgary

Robotics engineer Simon Engler has survived the rigors of a Mars mission without ever setting his space boots down on the Red Planet.

As part of a NASA-funded simulation, Engler hunkered down inside a two-storey dome on the northern slope of the Mauna Loa volcano. There, he and his fellow guinea pigs encountered "red-flag problems" related to inter-planetary exploration.

The HI-SEAS crew battled bouts of separation anxiety, yucky pre-packaged diets and stinky feet during the four-month social experiment staged on a barren lava field. It explored the emotional strain of being isolated for months or years at a time, with others.

"It's not a normal environment for a human to live in for a long period of time," Engler told Metro. "The reality is that you can take the best people in the world and — after a long period of time — things will start to slowly break down because people are unhappy with the environment.

"NASA really needs to know how to mitigate it before they actually take this mission."

Life on Hawaii's Big Island may sound like reality TV. But don't tell that to Engler, who sloughs off the much-publicized Mars One project for its "questionable financial responsibilities."

Engler, who at the time was a PhD student at the University of Calgary, says he pitched a robotic companion project as part of the application process for HI-SEAS, and was chosen from a pool of 700 applicants.

He describes his colleagues as brainy, "astronaut-like" folks who specialize in fields such as nanotechnology, geology and physics. They were a mixed bag of Type-A and Type–B personalities, which was supposedly the right mix during the dress rehearsal.

"If you have a balance between personality types then things will work out in the long run," said Engler, who is now helping out with Round 2 of the Mars simulation.

People problems aside, human settlers will also need to contend with supremely harsh environmental conditions on the freeze-dried planet. Hyper-arid soil, wicked dust storms and seasonal geysers provide formidable challenges.

The average temperature hangs around -53 C, although lows can be twice as chilly, according to the Canadian Space Agency. And spacesuits are needed to prevent the astronauts' skin and lungs from exploding due to low air pressure.

Finding water remains another massive hurdle for many researchers, as it's deemed a key indicator to whether the planet is hospitable to life.

"You're unlikely to find flowing water on the surface unless it was salt-rich. But even then it would be incredibly rare," said Chris Hugenholtz from the U of C. "That water's going to have to come from underground."

He noted there's plenty of evidence of "water-ice", or water in the form of ice, in the polar caps. But thirsty space explorers will also have to keep an eye out for spectacular geysers, which stem from a build-up of carbon dioxide gas below the south polar ice sheet. The jet-like eruptions are known to spew sand and dust hundreds of feet into the air.

Dust devils are known to blanket the entire planet over days, which Hugenholtz noted could impede space crews' solar-powered gear.

"There are some bizarre things occurring on the surface that they're going to have to deal with if they're in those more polar regions of Mars looking for water," he said.

Located at about 8,000 feet elevation, the Mars-like HI-SEAS habitat was free of cultural norms, endangered species and lush greenery. It featured a two-storey dome, enclosing a volume of 13,570 cubic feet. COURTESY OF DR. SIAN PROCTOR

A human expedition to Mars is proposed within the next 15 years. In the meantime, there are programs in place that attempt to recreate the conditions of the Red Planet. For Day 3 of our feature, Metro spoke with a guinea pig about his 'mission' and a professor about possible governance in deep space

LIVING UNDER MARTIAN LAW

Move over, Martians — humans are coming to town. But how would early space crusaders organize after putting footprints on the Red Planet? Paul Fairie, who teaches municipal governance at the University of Calgary, was nice enough to play along and offer some realpolitik answers to hypothetical questions:

METRO: Do the first Mars occupiers need to establish a local government? What have we learned from Lord of the Flies?

PF: If the first settlers were all initially astronauts and therefore mostly from a military background, there probably wouldn't be a need for local government right away, since they'd have a chain of command in place already. However, once a generation or two had passed and the population was no longer primarily military, I'd expect that they'd want to establish a local government to take care of basic local needs that couldn't just be completely dictated from Earth, like the fair distribution of resources and making sure society is functional. Otherwise, the colony would run the risk of being completely dictatorial, with us Earth-bound humans dictating laws to second- and third-generation Martians.

METRO: What's the best type of governing structure for this situation? Plutocracy?

PF: I imagine something of a two-stage process. First, a proper non-democracy where military ranks dictated who had power. This would work well with a small group of military-trained astronauts. After a while, we'd probably see the need for a local government for self-regulatory matters. At this point, we'd probably have a democracy — luckily the settlers would have the benefit of hindsight. What would be really exciting here is that the form the government could take would be quite unpredictable, because they would have the rare opportunity to make a completely new government.

HI-SEAS crew engineer Simon Engler used the Husky robot while testing machine operation in bulky spacesuits. He also explored how robotic companions ease loneliness. COURTESY OF DR. YAJAIRA SIERRA-SASTRE

METRO: How should Mars residents be taxed? Would an Alberta-style flat tax be an alien concept?

PF: Taxation would be a tricky one for a while since most of the resources will have to be brought in from Earth. If they were using an Earthling currency, would they be buying products and services from each other? Would they create their own currency? If so, how would they decide the initial allotment of funds? At least until the colony was big enough, I'd have to imagine a bartering economy would spring up for basic goods and services ("I'll trade you a hair cut for some Martian key lime pie."), and perhaps a social obligation to contribute some labour to the settlement might spring up before a currency economy would.

Florida jail. 2 inmates killed, 3 missing in apparent gas explosion

An apparent gas explosion all but destroyed a jail in the Florida Panhandle, killing two inmates, leaving three others missing and injuring as many as 150 people inside the building, authorities said Thursday.

The blast late Wednesday created a chaotic scene as injured inmates were bused to hospitals and others were taken to nearby jails because the crippled building had to be evacuated.

At a news conference, Escambia County Sheriff David Morgan wouldn't comment on whether inmates complained about smelling gas.

At least 3 dead in collapse of illegal gold mine

Colombian rescuers on Thursday hunted for more than a dozen people feared trapped beneath debris left in the collapse of an illegal gold mine that killed at least three people, officials said.

Cauca province Gov. Temistocles Ortega said the collapse occurred shortly before midnight in a rural area near Santander de Quilichao, about 315 kilometres southwest of Bogota, the capital.

By mid-afternoon, rescue workers had recovered the bodies of three dead and three injured, and he said they were searching for about 15 people still missing, according to the municipal police chief, Felipe Chacon.

Sinn Fein chief faces murder allegations

Cold case. Children of Belfast woman shot, secretly buried by IRA in 1972, hope Gerry Adams will be charged with the crime

For most of her life, Helen McKendry has demanded that Sinn Fein chief Gerry Adams come clean about his alleged leadership role in the Irish Republican Army — and about the outlawed group's abduction, slaying and secret burial of her mother, Jean McConville, in 1972.

As Adams spends a second day being interrogated by detectives over the unsolved crime, McKendry fears her day of justice will never come. She was one of 10 children left orphaned by her widowed 37-year-old mother's slaying.

"I'm hoping against hope that he doesn't walk out free," McKendry told The Associated Press. "Everybody, the dogs in the street, knew he was the top IRA man in Belfast at that time."

Northern Ireland has met news of Adams' arrest with a mixture of world-weary resignation and cynicism. Adams' fans and foes alike agree on this much: He's too important a figure in the peace process to go to jail, and he's never going to talk honestly about his past command positions in the Provisional IRA.

The underground army killed nearly 1,800 people — including scores of Catholic civilians and IRA members branded spies and informers — before calling a 1997 cease-fire so Sinn Fein could pursue peace with Britain and Northern Ireland's Protestant majority.

McKendry, alongside her husband Seamus, launched an often lonely protest campaign in 1995 against Adams' denial of IRA involvement in her mother's murder. On Thursday, the 56-year-old said she found it hard to believe he was finally in custody and facing police questions.

Timeline

- Two decades ago, Adams initially insisted in his first brief face-to-face meetings with the McKendrys that the IRA was not involved.
- Finally in 1999, under White House pressure, the IRA admitted responsibility for the slaying of Jean McConville and offered to pinpoint her unmarked grave on a beach 100 kilometres south of Belfast in the Republic of Ireland. That effort failed despite extensive digging.
- Then in 2003, a dog walker stumbled across her skeletal remains, with its bullet-shattered skull, protruding from a bluff above a different beach.

Banks still paranoid about pot

A Colorado plan to set up the world's first financial system for marijuana cleared its first hurdle in the state Legislature Thursday, despite deep reservations from supporters that the plan will work.

Sponsors acknowledged the plan is a long-shot attempt to again try to move the marijuana away from its cash-only roots without running afoul of federal law. Colorado has struggled for years to find ways to help its pot industry access banks. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sure, I'll move... for a 20% raise

Oh, plus ... all moving expenses and a $100,000 non-taxable, interest-free loan

A new survey suggests fewer than half of Canadians are willing to move for employment opportunities.

The survey, conducted by Ipsos Reid for the Canadian Employee Relocation Council, asked more than 2,000 Canadians whether they'd move either within their provinces or to other parts of the country for a job.

Only 10 per cent of respondents indicated an eagerness to move, while a third said they could be persuaded for the right job and the right incentives.

The top incentive selected by those respondents who said they would consider a move to another part of the country is a 20 per cent raise in pay, plus all moving expenses being covered by the employer.

Almost half said employers should also be allowed to provide non-taxable, interest-free loans of up to $100,000 for the purchase of a home in the new location.

‘A BOLD AND HISTORIC MOVE’

THE METRO LIST

Neil Morton
metronews.ca

1 Racism gets a smack down. Sacramento Mayor Kevin Johnson called it “a defining moment in history” and Al Sharpton “a bold and historic move.” Just months into his new role as NBA Commissioner, Adam Silver cemented his legacy already by banning LA Clippers owner Donald Sterling from the league after his racist remarks.

2 Selfie with Jim Carrey. When the A-list actor landed at Peterborough Airport Friday, he showed his down to earth side, posing in pictures on the tarmac with a bunch of high school students and in a selfie tweeted by student Zach Premate. The only thing that would have made it more epic is if Jerry Seinfeld was in the pic, too — he was in Peterborough a day later at the same airport.

3 Runaway blimp. It was the talk of the town this week as a two-storey, 21-metre-long Budweiser blimp in the shape of a hockey goal light broke loose from its tether in Saint John, N.B. Yep, this must have been a tricky one for Transport Canada, who was in hot (air?) pursuit. The blimp eventually landed in the woods northeast of the city, no doubt feeling a bit deflated.

4 Let’s go Raptors. Coming off their first road playoff victory in 13 years in Brooklyn, the Raptors took care of business at home in a nail-biter Wednesday night, and now can close things out in Game 6 Friday in Brooklyn. Everything is on the line for an amazing, courageous team having a Cinderella season.

5 Stop making sense. Parks Canada announced plans to install Wi-Fi hotspots in up to 50 parks this year. So next time you’re enjoying some solitude in the woods, you can stop and tell the world on Twitter, Instagram, Facebook and Snapchat.

6 National Canadian Film Day. REEL Canada had a novel idea: to do a National Canadian Film Day to draw attention to all the amazing films being made in this country. So Wednesday, people took to social media to talk about homegrown cinematic gems using the hashtag #CANFILMDAY. Beautiful thing. My fave two: Meatballs and The Sweet Hereafter.

7 Another one bites the Cyber Dust. Hailed as the Snapchat of words, the Cyber Dust app allows you to send a message to someone that will disappear forever 30 seconds after being opened by the recipient. Yes, you are now the James Bond of texting. Go wild.

8 Superhero supermovie. Awesome superhero fun, as Warner Bros. studio announced plans to make a Justice League movie. Superman, Batman, Wonder Woman, Aquaman, Flash and Green Lantern together in one movie? My goodness, I’m in superhero heaven.

He’s got a need for Speed

Helped by a Kickstarter campaign, Ryan Beitz, in addition to trying to get his hands on every VHS copy of Speed known to humankind, is also aiming to transform an old van into a replica of the original bomb-rigged bus. CONTRIBUTED

Q&A

Man tries to collect every VHS copy of ’90s classic

Twenty-six-year-old Ryan Beitz is a collector of sorts: He aims to own every VHS copy of the 1994 classic Speed. So stirring is Beitz’s pointless task that it compelled the movie’s screenwriter Graham Yost to use these touching words: “Other than world peace and ending hunger, I can think of no greater cause than what this one brave and visionary man has embarked upon.” The great feat doesn’t end there, though. Metro chats to the zany collector about The World Speed Project:

Obviously what you’re doing is a waste of time, so why are you so committed? There’s no real good reason for it. I’m dedicated only because it’s totally pointless and stupid. I’m totally dedicated to the uselessness if it.

Does it annoy you that people are trying to sabotage your goal by holding onto copies? People can try to thwart me but they are going to die and then I’ll have my copy.

Any words for the haters? I would say to them keep doing it because whether you love or hate the World Speed Project but especially if you hate it, you’re a part of it.

Do you play each copy to check it works? No, definitely not, but I did at first. Actually it paid off this one time because there was a copy of the Flintstones that was in a Speed case with the Speed label. But I figured that one out and I’ll find that other copy.

May every traffic delay be this cute

ANDREW FIFIELD

Among the things that add tedium to the absurd commuting times in some of our larger cities is that they tend to be caused by similar snafus. A blown tire. A fender bender. Every now and again an overturned truck of marbles or bees will spice things up a bit.

What we never get is a gang of adorable lion cubs and their watchful lionesses waking up after a long snooze on a stretch of sun-heated asphalt. For that kind of delay, you’re going to need your daily commute to take you through South Africa’s Kruger National Park, which we assume is named after the claws of those who live there. Synopsis

Fresh out of high school, Peter Parker (Andrew Garfield) is being pulled in two different directions. He loves Gwen Stacy (Emma Stone) but is troubled by a promise he made to her late father (Dennis Leary) that he would never let anything bad happen to her. Meanwhile, Peter's old friend Harry Osborn (Dane De Haan), heir to the Oscorp fortune, is battling a hereditary disease he thinks can be cured with a dose of Spider-Man's blood and Max Dillon (Jamie Foxx), a low level Oscorp electrical engineer, has an accident that rewires him into Electro, a villain with the power to control electricity.

The Amazing Spider-Man 2.

Franchise needs a more exciting story to keep the Reel Guys caught in its web

Richard: Mark, at two-and-a-half hours, the new Spider-Man movie is almost equal parts action and story.

The first 15 minutes contains not one, but two wild action sequences that'll make your eyeballs dance.

If you haven't had your fill of special effects for the week, your thirst will be quenched early on.

Then the onslaught of story begins.

Jammed packed with plot, bad guys and lots and lots of moony-eyed love, it's the busiest superhero movie in recent memory.

Did you get caught up in the film's web?

Mark: No, Richard, the movie got caught in its own web. Too much of the film is like the last one, which was very good, but do we need to rehash the origin story yet again?

The action sequences are good, and they'd better be, because the plot and characters are feeling kind of tired by now.

Not that there aren't good things in the movie.

I liked Jamie Foxx's villain, who was sadly sympathetic in a Frankenstein kind of way. And Dane DeHaan, as tortured Oscorp heir Harry Osborn, has the best scenes in the picture, with an otherworldly look that reminded me of a British fascist circa 1936 or Tilda Swinton's illegitimate son; I'm not sure which.

RC: I thought he kind of looks like the Evil Annoying Orange with a better haircut. To each his own.

He does have some of the best scenes in the film, and this is a movie with several well-crafted dramatic moments.

Too bad most of them feel like they're lifted from another movie and dropped into this one as placeholders for the action sequences.

Peter Parker is shedding tears over his love life one minute, swinging on webby vines through the streets the next.

Both tones are well executed, but they often feel forced together.

MB: The movie seems more like a pastiche than a sequel.

Sally Field, bless her Norma Rae heart, invests her part with the intensity of a Eugene O'Neill play.

Jamie Foxx makes a sympathetic villain in the Frankenstein mode even though he's made up like a rogue member of Blue Man Group. But Richard, why is Spidey so cocky this go round? His awkwardness is usually part of his charm.

RC: That's more from the comic books.

The Sam Raimi Spider-Man movies didn't use Spidey's sarcasm, but on the pages of the comics he wasn't shy to let loose with some trash talking.

MB: The movie is watchable and intermittently entertaining, but the franchise really needs to invigorate itself to keep me caught in its web.

Fed Up. New documentary compares processed food business to the tobacco industry

STEVE GOW
scene@metronews.ca

Fed Up opens next Friday in Toronto. CONTRIBUTED

The women behind the documentary Fed Up really hope to do for the food movement what An Inconvenient Truth did for climate change. And they may just achieve it.

"This is the whole plan of Fed Up," said Oscar-winning producer Laurie David, who, not so coincidentally, also produced An Inconvenient Truth.

"There are solutions that you can take as an individual. (We don't need) governments to start talking (about eating healthy). The fridge is right in your kitchen."

A comprehensive and provocative look at the stirring reasons behind America's obesity crisis, Fed Up targets the misinformation being spooned out by the food industry (most notably the sugar producers) and how our children are doomed with diabetes and shorter lifespans because of it.

In fact, the rise against processed foods truly echoes the movement against cigarettes from decades ago.

"That's the underlying premise of the film — put real information in front of people so that all of us as citizens have perspective not shaped by the food industry," said co-producer Heather Reisman, comparing the one-time positive spin of smoking by cigarette marketers.

"Like all businesses, (a food company's) job is to keep growing, keep getting bigger and to do that they're trying to get people addicted to what they're doing."

While the Katie Couric-narrated documentary uncovers heartbreaking true-life struggles and debunks the myths about diet and exercise fads, what the filmmakers truly hope Fed Up does is initiate personal action as well as create a stigma against celebrities selling sugar to kids.

"If soda is the tobacco of our generation then Beyoncé is the Marlboro Man," said director Stephanie Soechtig of the celebrity cola spokesperson.

"We need to have that same shame attached to it because she is endorsing a product that is killing kids."

Under the Skin. Director reveals the abstract of consciousness

There's a striking sequence in director Jonathan Glazer's 2004 psychodrama Birth in which his camera holds tight on the porcelain visage of actress Nicole Kidman. As opera swells on the soundtrack, we continue to hold while observing her run the gamut of emotion, climaxing with a shot of a single crystal tear streaking her cheek…

It's a moment of poetry, wordless and beautiful and its ominous grace is amplified throughout every minute of Glazer's latest film, Under the Skin. The movie stars Scarlett Johansson as a humanoid alien vampire, driving through the streets of Edinburgh hunting for viral men whom she seduces and harvests as food for her planet. Or something. The picture is sparse on dialogue and narrative clarity and that's exactly what makes it such a profound — and disturbing — cinematic experience.

"I think of it as an experimental film," Glazer says.

"There is no mastermind approach towards daring the audience. It's more just the nature of this particular story that is challenging. What is challenging, I think, is once you commit to her experience, you're looking at it through her lens and in doing so, the film has to be told in the same perspective. So I think it's demanding, but it's like anything: If you're open to it, then hopefully you'll enjoy the ride. If you're not, then you won't."

Scarlett Johansson. CONTRIBUTED

Under The Skin is nothing if not divisive. Impossible to market (Is it a science fiction piece? A horror film? Existential drama?), the film is an absolutely singular experience and aside from Glazer's dedication to the abstract, it's Johansson's remarkable, uninhibited turn (she is often unclothed) as the outsider adrift in a world she/it does not understand that makes it so compelling.

"That really is just about casting," says the filmmaker.

"It's about looking out there and seeing who the right person for the character is and for Birth it was Nicole and for this one, it was Scarlett. She went into it with her eyes open and she understood that she was dealing with a character that had a bravery that needed to be matched by hers as an actress. You can't pull back from that. If you pull back from that then you're pulling back from the telling of the story."

Reminiscent of heady '70s films like Nicolas Roeg's The Man Who Fell From Earth, Under the Skin is a subjective experience. Because it never overplays its hand or offers much in the way of exposition, each viewer will react to it differently. Such was its creator's intent. "I think its intention is to talk to the viewer at a level of consciousness. We bypass the intellect when we listen to music or when we look at a painting. I think film is a fantastic medium to be able to do the same. In how it's trying to represent something kind of unimaginable — this infinite and alien entity — it's not something for words, really. It shouldn't be explained away. Our intention was to protect its alienness, to remain inscrutable from beginning to end."

For Love's dad, Cobain case isn't closed

While authorities recently re-examined the 20-year-old death of Kurt Cobain and determined it was in fact a suicide, at least one person is still alleging that Cobain's wife, Courtney Love, had something to do with it — and that person is Love's father, Hank Harrison. "No doubt she was capable," Harrison reportedly told Radar Online. "I can't prove she pulled the trigger, but I can prove her involvement to a high degree of certainty." Harrison cites a note penned by Cobain that refers to Love's "doping and whoring." METRO WORLD NEWS

James claims LiLo broke into his hotel room at 3 a.m.

MELINDA TAUB
Metro World News

Remember Lindsay Lohan's bang list? Maybe it wasn't so much a list of guys she had slept with as it was a list of guys who'd read her bedtime stories after she followed them around for a while. That's what James Franco claims happened to him.

Franco never actually slept with LiLo — they just made out a little, he told Howard Stern (via Gawker). "We were at this hotel during a very dark period of her history," he says.

"It seemed pretty damn clear that she liked me. I'd come home late to the hotel and she'd come find me. I knew which room she was in and I'd see through the window, like, 'Oh, there's another party at Lindsay's,' and she would come out to the pool area and find me.

"She even broke into my room one time because she was so at home there, I guess they just gave her the key. And so 3 in the morning I was on the couch, and I open my eyes and there's Lindsay in my room at 3 a.m. and it's like, 'OK, what do I do now?' I read her a story. I was in school, so I was like, 'All right, maybe I'll get a little homework done so I'll read her a story.'"

Franco may be the first famous gentleman to go on Howard Stern to brag about not sleeping with a beautiful woman.

Geldof's death linked to use of heroin: Police

Heroin likely played a role in the death of British model and television personality Peaches Geldof, authorities said Thursday.

Detective Chief Inspector Paul Fotheringham of the Kent and Essex Serious Crime Directorate told an inquest into the death of the second daughter of Bob Geldof that a post-mortem examination was inconclusive, prompting further tests. In a brief hearing, Fotheringham said the results on the 25-year-old confirmed the presence of the drug.

"There was recent use of heroin and the levels identified were likely to have played a role in her death," he said.

Geldof's husband, Thomas Cohen, found her on April 7 after returning home from a visit to his parents.

"Thomas entered the property and went upstairs thinking that Peaches may have been sleeping." Fotheringham said. "Thomas then located Peaches in a spare bedroom and it was obvious to him that she was deceased.

"She was located on the edge of a bed with one leg hanging down to the floor with the other leg tucked underneath her; she was slumped forward across the bed."

Peaches Geldof ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Fotheringham said that even though Geldof had spent much of that weekend alone, she had been in contact with friends and family.

"All of the friends and family who had contact with Peaches during this period describe how she seemed her normal self and was making plans for the future," Fotheringham said.

While at a friend's wedding in New Brunswick last weekend, I found my roots in a bowl of homemade seafood chowder.

Growing up in Nova Scotia, a recipe of potatoes and just about anything from the ocean was more than a touristy treat in my house, its creation was a family tradition.

There were at least six different versions, from three generations, served at our gatherings. What they all had in common was a creamy consistency, which always caused trouble when it came to a wine match.

I'm in the white camp when it comes to chowder. No matter the recipe, the outcome is all about subtle flavours. The dark berry weight and forward tannins found in most glasses of red wine doesn't do the marriage (in your mouth) any favours.

Whites like those made from pinot grigio, unoaked chardonnay and sauvignon blanc work best. Chile's 2012 Santa Rita Reserva Sauvignon Blanc ($13.95 - $14.99) is fresh and tropical, with zesty citrus fruit and acidity that makes it a perfect partner with any chowder's cream and fish schtick. PRICES REFLECT RANGE ACROSS COUNTRY. Condiment

Chili Lime Salt

- 1 large fresh red chili
- 1/2 cup flaky sea salt
- finely grated zest of 2 limes

Remove seeds from chili and slice flesh into tiny pieces. Mix with the sea salt and lime zest in a mortar and pestle or food processor and pound or blitz to form a fine crumb. If you want to store the salt for later use, dry it out in the oven at 150 C for 30 minutes.

Ducks, Kings primed for first playoff battle of L.A.

NHL. Rivals separated by 30 miles to square off for the first time in post-season Saturday

Southern California is in hockey heaven.

The Los Angeles Kings and the Anaheim Ducks will meet in the second round of the NHL playoffs this weekend, taking their Freeway Faceoff rivalry into the post-season for the first time.

"People have been waiting a long time for this," said Ducks forward Emerson Etem, who grew up rooting for the Kings in his native Long Beach. "It's huge for the game down here."

And it's huge for the Los Angeles sports scene, which has never experienced a matchup quite like the series that begins in Orange County on Saturday night.

The Lakers and the Clippers have never met in the NBA post-season. The Dodgers and the Angels have never reached the World Series together. The Rams and the Raiders never faced off in the NFL playoffs when they both called Southern California home nearly two decades ago.

But in their 20th season of head-to-head competition for the hearts of the Southland's hockey fans, the Kings and Ducks are squaring off for a trip to the Western Conference finals.

"We've been waiting for this to happen for a long time, and now it's finally here," Kings centre Jarret Stoll said.

With their rinks just 30 miles apart on the I-5 freeway, the Kings and Ducks have been geographical rivals ever since Anaheim entered the NHL as a Disney-backed expansion franchise in 1993.

Patrick Sharp thought the Chicago Blackhawks were going to play the Colorado Avalanche. Then he thought they were going to play the Minnesota Wild. Then he thought they were going to play the Avs again, and on and on it went.

While the Wild and Avalanche played an epic Game 7 on Wednesday night, the Blackhawks were hanging on every goal.

"It was crazy. Back and forth. Every time there was a goal scored, I was thinking we were playing that team or the other team, right down to the very end," Sharp said.

The very end had the Wild celebrating after Nino Niederreiter's second goal of the game lifted Minnesota to a 5-4 overtime win at Colorado, setting up a rematch from last year's playoffs. Minnesota lost to Chicago in five games in the first round, and the Blackhawks went on to win their second NHL title in four seasons.

"It is definitely a different team," Blackhawks coach Joel Quenneville said. "You got to commend them on how they played at the end of the year to get themselves in the playoffs. Had a great run and had a lot of momentum going into that series, and they played a great series."

Minnesota became the first team in NHL history to record four tying goals in Game 7 of a Stanley Cup playoff series, according to STATS.

The Blackhawks will host the Wild in Game 1 on Friday night. THE ASSOCIATED PRES

Who's Johnny? Opinions mixed on football's Manziel

As he discussed the possibility of quarterback Johnny Manziel being picked by Cleveland in the upcoming draft, Browns linebacker Quentin Groves made a small sign of the cross.

A prayer that he's coming? A plea that he stays away?

Groves' intentions with his gesture weren't clear.

Like just about everything around Johnny Football, there's no definite answer.

The most polarizing player to enter the NFL in a while, Manziel is being closely linked to the Browns, who own the No. 4 overall pick in next week's draft and have been seeking a franchise quarterback for more than a decade.

Cleveland's inability to land a QB either in the draft or via free agency or blind luck may be the single biggest reason the Browns have only made the playoffs once since 1999 and seem to change coaches every year.

There are those who believe Manziel can save the Browns. Others feel the Texas A&M quarterback's dazzling skills — and size — won't translate to the pro game.

He's dynamic.
He's too small.
He's a game-changer.
He's self-absorbed.
He's a hard worker.
He's a head case.
He's charismatic.

Everyone has an opinion on Manziel, the 2012 Heisman Trophy winner who has been projected as being picked anywhere from the top 5 to the bottom of the first round. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Near-collapse gives Raps renewed focus

NBA playoffs. Toronto club loses some sleep escaping with victory in Game 5

Toronto guard Greivis Vasquez had a hard time getting any rest Wednesday night after the Raptors blew a huge lead in a pivotal Game 5 win over Brooklyn.

He kept thinking about the mental mistakes, missed assignments and sloppy play that nearly cost them the game.

"I couldn't sleep. That was disgusting," Vasquez said Thursday. "That was ugly — a couple turnovers, a couple fouls, a couple (baskets and fouls) for them. It wasn't us."

Toronto saw its 26-point lead disintegrate as the Nets put up a whopping 44 points in the fourth quarter Wednesday night. It took a late basket from Raptors guard Kyle Lowry and four key free throws by DeMar DeRozan to preserve a 115-113 victory.

With the narrow victory, the Raptors moved a win away from locking up a berth in the second round of the NBA playoffs. But the fact they came perilously close to what would have been an epic loss was hard to ignore.

The Raptors held a closed-door practice session Thursday afternoon at Air Canada Centre and emerged confident that the blip was behind them. They'll try to close out the Nets on the road in Game 6 on Friday night.

"The mental things going into each game — that was the lesson today, more so than thinking about closing out," Casey said. "We've got to again continue to improve and not make some of the mistakes we've been making."

Toronto's stars came up big before a raucous home crowd on Wednesday. Lowry had a 36-point night and DeRozan added 23 points and six rebounds.

Casey noted that it was one of DeRozan's strongest games of the series, adding he did a nice job getting out of traps so his teammates could attack the weak side of the floor. He also praised Lowry, who played one of his best games as a Raptor.

"Kyle's play — it carried us," Casey said. "Without his offence, we would have really struggled. But he ignited everybody and got us free-flowing up and down the floor."

Toronto led 62-44 at the half and had a comfortable 91-69 edge after three quarters.

However, on three occasions in the fourth quarter, the Raptors committed fouls beyond the arc to set up rare four-point play situations. Blown coverages also let Brooklyn's Joe Johnson heat up, and he scored 26 of his 30 points in the second half. THE CANADIAN PRESS
